Separate Meetings

Faced with a flood of speculation that the talks were in danger of collapse, Mr. Carter responded by summoning the Israeli and Egyp-tian delegations to separate meetings at the White House on Friday night and yesterday morning.

The discussions there triggered a new, 4½-hour negotiating session yesterday. Mr. Sherman said today that it was in that meeting that "the principal issues were resolved as far as the Egyptian and Israeli delegations are concerned."

The texts of the agreement have now been referred to the Israeli and Egyptian governments, and, if they give their approval, some sources connected to the talks said the treaty could be ready for initialing shortly after Mr. Dayan and Mr. Weizman return to Washington about the middle of this week.

Egyptian sources indicated to-night that the draft treaty would be acceptable to President Anwar Sadat's government. On the other side, Mr. Dayan, before leaving Washington, said be would recom-mend that the Israeli Cabinet ap-prove the tentative agreement.

JERUSALEM, Oct.22 (WP) - Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said today that details of the draft peace treaty with Egypt have been agreed upon hy both sides, but that some important subjects remain unresolved and that the document is not yet ready for signature.

Mr. Dayan would not specify what items remain unresolved, but his remarks upon arriving at Ben-Gurion Airport appeared at slight variance with a more optimistic interpretation given by the U.S. State Department earlier today.

Mr. Dayan said that the Israeli Cabinet would be given the opportunity to reject the draft treaty, demand changes or reopen aspects resolved in principle in the negotiations at the Blair House in Washington. His comments about still-disputed items were interpreted here as being intended for local political consumption, and government sources said it was likely that the foreign minister would recommend approval of the

On the financing question, Israel wants U.S. aid to help cover the costs of relocating the settlers it has moved into Sinai and of building twn air bases to replace those it now has in Sinai, However, as sources involved in the talks pointed out today, that is really a matter that Israel bas to negotiate with the United States rather than Egypt.

Rhodesia Claims Up to 1,500 Guerrillas Die in Raids

By Michael T. Kaufman

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Oct. 22 (NYT) — Rhodesian forces have killed more than 500 and perhaps as many as 1,500 guerrillas during four days of raids on guerrilla encampments deep inside Zamhia, according to a military communique issued bere yesterday.

Yesterday's communique said forced to reopen its rail ties with that in addition to this assault "a minimum of 500 terrorists were killed." The statement continued: This includes numbers of trained. uniformed and armed female terrorists. Because of the widespread nature of these operations, an accurate casualty count was not possi-ble but it is assessed that there were hundreds more killed. This is substanuated by Zambian estimates that terrorist casualties, not including the camp near Lusaka, are in excess of 1,500 dead."

Arms Reported Destroyed

There are said to be 8,000 guerrillas currently operating inside Rhodesia, while estimates of those massed in camps in Mozamhique and Zambia are about 22,000. The approach of the rainy season has customarily been a time of increasing guerrilla infiltration. Elements within the military here have long advocated stepped-up search-anddestroy missions across the country's borders.

According to the communique, large quantities of arms, explosives and equipment were seized or destroyed. The boldness of the attacks was underscored by the report that the Rhodesians remained on the ground in Zambia for four days and that the planes carrying Rhodesian troops apparently were not challenged over Zambian air

During the entire operation in Zambia, said the communique, every effort was made to avoid clashing with Zambian forces hut. on one occasion, a Zambian patrol led by terrorisis engaged a small Rhodesian detachment. In the ensuing contact 37 of the attackers were killed." The statement did not specify how many of these casualues were Zambian soldiers and how many guerrillas.

At the same time the raids were going on in Zambia — raids which the statement reported were now at an end, with all men withdrawn there were also Rhodesian strikes against camps in Mozambique. Of these the communique said only that they were successful, adding: Casualties were inflicted but we are unable to give details."

Carter Reveals Package Of Wage-Price Guidelines

sign a statement that they are in compliance with both wage and price

According to a "fact sheet" issued by the White House, increases above the guidelines would "trigger actions by the government."

These actions could include relaxing restrictions on imports or adjusting federally regulated rate or wage levels.

Mr. Carter said that the federal Council on Wage and Price Stability. which has a staff of about 30 persons, will get 100 additional employees and will monitor all collective bargaining contracts and the prices of the top 400 firms in the nation, those with annual sales of more than $500

"These standards are fair," the president said. "They are standards that everyone can follow. If we do follow them, they will slow prices down—so that wages will not have to chase prices to stay even."

Mr. Carter said that cutting the federal deficit and forgoing future federal income tax cuts would require "national austerity" and "hard

"I intend to make those hard choices," Mr. Carter said, adding that he would continue to veto spending measures if necessary to "keep our nation firmly on the path of fiscal restraint." Mr. Carter said that his limits on federal hiring would mean a reduction of more than 20,000 in the number of permanent federal employees budgeted for this year. However, a rider attached to the recently enacted civil service revision bill requires Mr. Carter to cut the federal workforce by about 30,000 to 40,000 persons. The president appealed to potential critics of his anti-inflation program to give it careful study before attacking it.

"These proposals, which give us a chance, also deserve a chance," he said. "If, tomorrow, or next week, or next month, you ridicule them, ignore them, pick them apart before they have a chance to work, you will have reduced their chance of succeeding."

Mr. Carter said that his program can work, given time, but will not produce any immediate, dramatic cut in the inflation rate.

"If there is one thing that I am asking of every American tonight, it is to give this plan a chance to work — a chance to work for us," the president said.

Main Points of Plan

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP) - Here are the main elements of President Carter's anti-inflation program:

• Pay standard: Annual increases in wages and private fringe benefits are not to exceed an average of 7 percent in new wage contracts. Workers earning less than $4 an hour are exempted.

 Price standard: Individual firms are to limit their price increases over the next year to 0.5 percentage points below the increase during 1976-77. Enforcement: The program is described as voluntary hut companies with government contracts would have to certify that they are following the standards. The government could open that field to foreign competition or tighten other regulations against offenders.

· Compliance: The Council on Wage and Price Stability will look at prices and wages in 400 major industries to monitor compliance. Wage insurance: The president asked Congress for a program of "real wage insurance." Workers who belong to groups that meet the pay standard would get a tax rebate if the rate of inflation exceeds 7 percent. Spending: Mr. Carter promises a tight rein on the growth in federal spending and a limit on federal hiring to filling one out of two vacancies.

Ethiopians Bogged Down on Two Fronts in Horn

By Drew Middleton

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (NYT) — "The year of NATO," as it was confidently called by administration officials earlier this year, is drawing to a close with few signs that the United States' perform-ance will match the bright promise of spring.

From the vantage point of Capitol Hill there were good reasons to go slow on some of the programs aimed at raising the defensive mili-tary power of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. However cogent these reasons appear in Washington, it is clear from the remarks nf U.S. and allied officials and offi-cers in Europe that they have been disappointed by the American

Washington and the European capitals realized from the start that a sudden spasm of energy by NATO after a decade of oeglect could do nn more than set the guidelines for a gradual improvement to the West's military position. These guidelines lay down that the defense of Western Europe against a possible Soviet attack rests to a large degree on the rapid transfer by air of three divisions, one armored, and an armored cavalry regiment from the United States to Europe.

Other smaller allied units will land on the continent from Britain and Canada. But in a crisis or a war, the U.S. forces now earmarked for Europe, including at least 40 tactical air squadrons, are regarded at present as the principal available reinforcement for NATO's Central Front, which runs from Denmark

Brigade to Norway

These reinforcements would not be the limit of U.S. involvement. Other units from the Reserve and National Guard would be carried to Europe hy sea later.

Moreover, very early in any at-tack a Marine Corps brigade would be sent to northern Norway to support the greatly oumumbered Norwegian forces there. The capabilities of the Army and Air Force to carry out their reinforcement missioo are linked to the number of transport aircraft available. Robert Komer, the Defense Department's

The importance of such facilities is reflected in the emphasis that Army and Air Force officers in Europe place on the security of weap ons, ammunition and fuel in the event of war. They are convinced that only hardened or semi-hardened sites could survive an initial Soviet attack by fighter-bombers or

The congressional rationale for these reductions, as expressed by the Senate Armed Services Committee, was that the United States is shouldering a disproportionate share of costs for NATO construc-

European civilian and military sources admit that this is true. But they also contend that the Europe-an allies have contributed signifi-cantly to NATO's military infrasmeture program and will contrib-ute more in the future as the effect of the 3-percent increase in defense spending, agreed on this year at the NATO summit in Washington, is

Effects on Europe

They also point out that the con-gressional cuts will have their great-est effect on the U.S. mission in Europe. Most European and U.S. military planners believe that the first Soviet air and missile attacks would be directed at command and control sites, ammunition and fuel depots and airfields. While the NATO air forces believe they can handle most Soviet air sorties and successfully attack some missile bases, they also realistically concede that some hostile planes or missiles would get through. Only the hardening of sites now will provide the measure of protection sufficient for a coherent ground and air defense, they argue.

Differences on specific weapons systems also exist between the military and some members of Congress. One controversial weapons system is the short-range cruise missile, with either a nuclear con-ventional warhead, intended by the Navy for the attack of land targets.

The Navy's Tomahawk cruise missile being built by General Dy-namics has a range of 360 miles. The Navy contends that, mounted in submarines or surface ships, the Tomahawk would be an effective weapon against enemy airfields in Europe with either a conventional or nuclear warhead.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 - The White House has called on tax offi-cials in Atlanta and Sumter County, Ga., to review alleged discrepan-cies in property valuations used to compute President Carter's federal and local taxes in 1975 and 1976. A claim that the use of different figures to calculate the two sets of taxes saved Mr. Carter at least $8,000 "raises legitimate questions to which we do oot yet have answers." Rex Granum, deputy

ABC said they show that a peanut sheller bought in 1975 for the Carter peanut warehouse io Plains, Ga., was valued at $695,000 when it was written off for a federal investment tax credit but was val-ued for local taxes at $375,000. In 1976, the network said, a peanut loader written off for $367,000 on the federal return was listed at $50,000 for property tax purposes. The network's assumption that the discrepancy meant either a sav-ing for Mr. Carter of $8,000 in local taxes or of $36,000 in federal income taxes was questioned in Sumter County, where property tax valuations are held down by state

By Nicholas Gage

ATHENS, Oct. 22 (NYT) Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher ended two days of talks yesterday with Greek leaders during which he pledged U.S. sup-port for Greece's return to com-plete membership in the Atlantic Alliance and predicted progress toward a Cyprus settlement in the next four to five months.

Mr. Christopber's visit occurred at a time when relations between Athens and Washington were cool-ing in the aftermath of the lifting of the arms embargo against Turkey. The visit was seen as an attempt to reassure the Greeks that, while Washington wants to improve its relations with Turkey, it will not do it at Greece's expense.

A joint statement issued at the conclusion of the visit said that the United States opposed the use of force to settle disputes in the eastern Mediterranean and pledged to maintain the military balance in the region. Both assurances were welcomed by the Greeks, whose armed forces are much smaller than those of Turkey.

the U.S. repre and said both Greek and Turkish Cypriots had softened their positions recently so that negotiations between the two sides might be expected in the next six months. While statistics about Strasbourg's income from this cross-border business were not available from city officials, local shop-keepers said it has protected local prosperity amid depressed economic conditions in eastern France's industry. The satisfaction of the merchants was not universally shared in Strasbourg. A Frenchman grumbled that local residents were crowded out of the best inns oo Sundays to make room for Germans. Despite official denials, the weekly German influx has boosted local inflation, according to a Strasbourg housewife, who contended that shoes and meat were significantly cheaper in French towns 50 miles away.

As German spending, spurred by the mark's climb, has expanded here, French earnings inside Germany have declined. The oumber of local Frenchmen working in German factories has been nearly halved to about 23,000 due to recent shutdowns of German enterprises hit by the economic crisis.

German purchasing power appeared destined to become even more conspicuous if the mark gains strength prior to the planned start-ing date in January of a new European monetary system, a local expert predicted.

Estonian Collective: Model of Efficiency

By Kevin Klose

PAIDE, U.S.S.R., Oct. 22 (WP)

This is a low-lying land of bog, pond and moss, where the Baltic plain runs down to the cold northern sea. Teutonic knights, Danes, Swedes, Nazis and Russians have fought and died to control the soil. but few permanent marks of their conquests remain.

Instead, the most visible and enduring sign of endless human toil are large stone piles in the middle of fields, piles built through the years as peasants plucked rocks from their furrows to raise grain and hay to feed herd and family.
Soviet collectivization of individual farms began here in Estonia af-ter World War II. It met stiff resistance from the Estonians but now is complete. A recent tour of one of the farms, near this provincial city 60 miles southeast of Tallion, the capital, gave a glimpse of what the Russians extol as the better way of doing things.

The "Ninth of May" collective, w that stendied is named for the date of the Nazi canariols manipular manipu pitulation in 1945, was founded 30 years ago and combines nine small collectives totaling 24,700 acres, of which 12,000 are under cultivation. In Tallinn recently, a group of chiefs of traffic police from the Soviet Union and several East-bloc countries gathered in the 15th cen-tury city hall to hear a concert given in their honor by a 13-member group that specializes in medieval and Renaissance religinus and court music.

The policemen listened intently and applauded the performance by the group of men, who wore tights, brocade tunics and lace-trimmed shirts. That Tallinn officials would schedule such a concert for such an audience says something about the drive for culture in the city.

The state-supported group.

"Hortus Musicus," according to its leader, Andres Mustonen, found most of their music in the Lenin Library. The concert that night included 15th and 16th century Italian court music, as well as choral music from the Mass that included the Pater Noster and the Agnus Dei. Their instruments included harosichord, sackbut, viola da gamba, and several recorders.

Hortus Musicus means "garden music" in Laun. Mr. Mustonen said be chose the name because nf its traditinnal meaning and richness. The group has toured the Soviet Union for the last four years and has made five records. He said interest in Renaissance and baroque music is growing among the nation's youth.

> Each summer here for the last few years, a handful of Estonians has quietly worked on the oral histnry of one of this republic's most sensitive periods — the years between 1920 and 1940 when Estonia was internationally recognized as an independent, sovereign country.

> Their work will never be officialpublished nr recognized, howev-, since it varies with official Soviet histories of the time.

The Soviet version is that Estonia voluntarily joined the Soviet Union in a successful workers' uprising in 1917-19, but that reactionary nobility and bourgeoisie, stiffened by British naval units and volunteers from Western nations, installed a reactionary bourgeois government that kept power through 1940. The Soviet occupatinn and annexation of Estonia in 1940 is considered as the restoranon of legitimate Soviet power.

Although imperial Russia ruled Estonia from the early 1700s in 1917, by the late 1930s nnly about 8 percent of the population was Russian, Since 1940, this has changed radically. The Russian population now makes up 32 percent of the country - 43 percent in Tallian - and is climbing.

One reason is Estonia's higher living standards. Another is that the Russians seem mnre willing to take unpleasant jnbs, such as nil-shale mining in large open-pit mines near Narva in eastern Estonia. The oil is distilled and burned at pit-bead electric stations. It produces a substantial part of Estonia's electricity and allows the tiny republic to export electricity.

The Line Outside the CAB

The line that started to form Thursday morning outside the Civil Aeronautics Board is quite unlike the lines we are all familiar with at airports and ticket offices. This one is not intended for passengers. It is a line, filled by representatives of almost all the airlines. to determine the order in which they will file papers in the scramble for routes — and, of course, for passengers and profits - that will begin when President Carter signs the new deregulation legislation. He's expected to do so Wednesday.

The new law will open up for grabs hundreds of air routes all over the United States. In most instances, they will go to the first airline asking for them. In most instances, they involve routes on which there is little or no competition or no regular air service. Other provisions of the law will make it easier for airlines to drop routes they no longer want, to lower or raise their fares, to merge with other airlines, and even to steal routes on which other airlines are now providing limited service.

Only the individual airlines know what documents those 20 or so representatives are waiting to file. But the fact that the line began to form at least seven days before the first document can be filed demonstrates the importance the airlines are placing on this event. The people spending the weekend on Connecticut Avenue may be filing applications that will change the whole route structure of the airline industry almost overnight.

So far, all the commentary about what deregulation would mean in terms of routes and air services has been based on theory. The documents to be filed after Mr. Carter signs the new legislation will translate that theory into actions. The result will be interesting, if not decisive, for efforts to deregulate other industries. If the airlines leap at this opportunity to test themselves in a competitive marketplace, as the line suggests they will, and if passengers come out winners through lower fares and better service, as the theory says they should, then the impetus for Congress to lower the barriers in other highly regulated industries will be great.

Next on the list should be the Interstate Commerce Commission and the trucking industry. If competition is good for the air-lines, it ought to be even better for the truckers, who now operate in an environment that fosters trips without cargo. It will be a much harder battle to deregulate the trucks. We look forward to the day when the line of people seeking the opportunities that competi-

a society. There is an illustration of that truth in the melancholy circumstances under which Arrigo Levi, the editor of La Stampa of Turin, is leaving his newspaper. Italy's bet-ter papers are currently being produced under conditions that amount to siege. The gunmen of the ultraleft have made a special target of people in the news business, and it takes extraordinary courage to keep printing the kind of reporting and commentary that offends the terrorists.

For some time Mr. Levi has worn a bulletproof vest as a matter of course. He moves around his city under police guard. A year ago his deputy editor was shot to death by four young men. Turin has been a center of political violence in recent years, and perhaps La Stampa attracts more attention from the radicals than most papers because its owner is Fiat, the automobile company. The strain of living and working under those conditions wears people down. After five years of it, Mr. Levi has resigned and intends to live in London for the coming year.

The terrorists' gunplay is highly selective,

Terrorism inflicts many kinds of burden on and its effects are rarely visible to the eye of a casual visitor to Italy. THE WASHINGTON POST.

The ongoing worldwide process of exterminating numerous animal and vegetable species has been causing concern on moral grounds for some years. It is a process that also causes economic damage at a time when much of the world's population is living in poverty.

There are four main reasons for protecting the environment - ethical, aesthetic, scientifie and economie - and most conservationists have hitherto based themselves on the moral ground, questioning whether mankind has any right to exterminate other species.

The developing countries, on the other hand, have to cope with pressing economic problems and their governments are therefore apt to give short-term gains priority over long-term conservation. Yet with all due understanding for this attitude, it is astonishing and frightening how little realization there is of how much the future of the world depends on the comparatively few plant and animal species that still remain.

Knocking on the Door

The Italian Senate's Commission for Constitutional Affairs will examine the proposed electoral laws for the European Parliament (why it took so long to get around to it is something we cannot understand). The principle of direct representation seems safe, at least for the time being. Io each of the nine constituencies, into which the Italian republic has been divided, each party will present its own list, thereby giving the electors the right to choose the names that suit them best, as in national elections. But the number of seats at Italy's disposal in the European Parliament is only 81, and not about 1,000 as in the Italian Parliament. Hence, the minimum number of votes needed to secure a seat is not 30,000 or 40,000, but 500,000, or 600,000. This is a disaster for the smaller parties because none of them can collect so many votes in any of the constituencies That is why we allow ourselves to put for-

International Opinion Environment and Third World ward some modest proposals to the Italian Liberal Party, which has always been the most receptive to certain proposals. It has nothing to lose in these elections. It can win one seat at the most with a quota of 500,000 or 600,000 votes by putting together the remnants of all nine districts. It might as well give up its own name and become head of a list of independents and present it in all the constituencies with the lineup of names of international repute: from Gianni Agnelli to Alfredo Diana, from Guido Carli to Riccardo Ossola and Giuseppe Petrilli (if he doesn't join up with the Christian Democrats), names which in fact have not gained their reputation through their well-recognized skills in handling European matters. This type of counter-list would have given the country a chance to make a elear statement of its irritation with a political class that is trying once again to impose its own choices on the electors. Such an initiative would in fact restore its real meaning to this election, a meaning which it surely possesses in other countries: The members of the European Parliament should be the representatives of the nation and not delegates of the

Rhodesia Plan

The latest Anglo-American peace program to be produced still calls for a conference as the first aim and still puts provisions for free and fair elections in Rhodesia above the achievement of a cease-fire. To make any sense, both the order and the priorities must surely be reversed . . .

International peacekeeping forces have been introduced at many of the world's flashpoints simply as military buffers to keep rival armies apart. Formidable though the operation would be, it is time it was also attempted along Rhodesias frontiers, as the necessary precondition for any negotiations.

The jury which set free the cowardly politician who shot Mr. Gonzales must be taken as an authoritative exponent of Carolina justice. The acquittal is a conviction of Carolina as a barbarous commonwealth, a disgrace to American civilization."

Teddy Is 'Remembering' Fritz

By David S. Broder

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — It was one of those Irish throwaway lines, a joke that may have been what the youths of my time called "kidding on the square."

"I remember when Fritz [Mondale] came to the Senate," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., told a Democratic fund-raiser here the other night. "Hubert said to me, "He's a nice, bright young fellow. Give him a hand." So I helped him along, and suddenly there he is"—and Kennedy pointed skyward—"high up on the ladder of success, looking down at me."

It got the laugh Kennedy expected from the vice president's homestate friends, and he immediately took the edge off the line by adding took the edge off the line by adding that "President Carter showed his good judgment in selecting Fritz as his running mate."

But it was not altogether fitting. For in a way that both these able. ambitious young men recognize, they are not only admirers of each other, but potential rivals. Kennedy's friends are divided in their guesses about whether he might, under some circumstances, challenge Jimmy Carter in 1980. But few of them think he would give up without a fight and let Mondale take over the presidential nomination (and a possible eight-year lease on the White House) in 1984.

The immediate beneficiary of this distant and well-disciplined rivalry is the Democratic Party, whose candidates this year are getting good campaign service from both Mondale and Kennedy.

Both men are pros. Both are good drawing cards. And hoth are much in demand, Mondale has been on the road for weeks, but Kennedy is in gear now that Control of the virtues of the candidate he is the virtues of the candidate he is visiting, but he never forgets his other client, President Carter, Mondale says that Carter has faced and mastered the toughest problems any president has tackled in his first two years in office. Ken-nedy is careful nor to criticize Carter publicly, but he measures his praise by the teaspoon.

"The one thing that Hubert Humphrey and John F. Kennedy and Franklin D. Roosevelt understood - and that we hope Jimmy Carter uoderstands," Kennedy said here, "is that you cannot meet the oceds of the nation without a strong economy." That was a subtle qualifier he slipped in, but it did

Dizzying Change In Post-Mao China

By David Milton and Nancy Dall Milton

SAN FRANCISCO — The mood of post-Mao China is obvious in the bustle of department store crowds and in the crush of people in front of appliance counters and television or radio displays. Evidence can also be found in the letter to the relief of the result of the relief of the relie ters to the editors of major Chinese newspapers complaining about the price of lentils and rice and lament-ing the scarcity of consumer goods. But the interest in consumer products is only a narrow glimpse of a significant shift behind China's political scene.

In the two years since Mao's death, the de-Maoization of China death, the de-Maoization of China has proceeded at a dizzying pace. And with it, China has moved toward a major realignment of the strategic balance in a world dominated by two superpowers. At a time when the United States and the Soviet Union have arrived at what Washington concedes is "essential parity" in nuclear strength, the Carter administration is pursuing closer ties with China. At the same time China, pursuing its own "containment" policy, has moved into close alliances with countries hostile to the Soviet Union.

'Parallel Interests'

In Peking last May, Chinese Pre-mier Hua Kno-feng discussed "par-allel interests" with President Carter's national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, then traveled to Romania and Yugoslavia, the most independent nations in the Russians' Eastern European back-

At the same time, Peking indicated it has softened its line on China's long-standing goal to "liberate" Taiwan by allowing Chi-nese scientists for the first time to participate in an international con-ference in Tokyo also attended by representatives from Taiwan. Since the Taiwan question no longer holds top priority on Peking's agen-da, the United States can comfortably strengthen its influence with both Chinese regimes.

Not long after that, on Aug. 12, the Chinese-Japanese peace and friendship treaty, joining the vast population of China with the technological and economic strength of Japan, was signed in Peking.

Finally, the post-Mao Chinese leadership has brought its power to bear on Vietnam in a contest for spheres of influence in Southeast Asia. For strategic considerations, Pelong is willing to suffer the political embarrassment of its alliance with Cambodia, Old-fashioned nationalism appears to be replacing the revolotionary ideology of Mao Tse-tung in a drive to make China a leading industrial world power by the year 2000.

Education Shift

Still another step away from Maoist isolationism was the deci-sion to send tens of thousands of China's brightest students abroad ence, technology and methodology. Never before has a Communist country appeared willing to expose its youth to prolonged foreign in-fluence and thus to place so much of its fate in the hands of the advanced capitalist nations.

And Peking appears determined to encourage foreign investments and loans, imports of equipment, technical aid, joint companies and temporary concessions of natural

China's remarkable shift away from Maoist concepts of self-reliant development (ideas far predating the Cultural Revolution and the "Gang of Four") to a massive dependence on foreign science and industry, is linked to the key Chinese development strategy - edu-

The Cultural Revolution began with struggles over the selection of university students and the class composition of the consequent in-tellectual elite. That central question has never been absent from the policy shifts of the last 15 years. China's recently announced intention of sending thousands of university students abroad as a part of the crash program to achieve advanced world standards by the year 2000 is, therefore, an essential component of the new development

This announcement carried with other significant implications. For one thing, the new education policy is unabashedly elitist — a fact made quite clear with the return of competitive entrance examinations: For another, these educa-tional plans could well lead to the formation of a Western-trained

To run the finances of a multi-market business like The Thomson Organisation, a man must be as multifaceted as his company.

His banker must be the same.

As Finance Director of The Thomson Organisation, Michael Brown must manage the financial resources and help assure the profitability of a large and rapidly growing group with interests in publishing, travel and Thomson publishes The Times, The Sunday Times, regional news-papers, books, Family Circle in the UK, Living, numerous trade, technical and educational publications in some ten countries around the world, owns Thomson Travel and its subsidiary Britannia Airways. Through an association with the Occidental Consortium, it is involved in the development of oil fields in the North Sea. So Michael Brown must have in-depth financial knowledge not only about Thomson's products, but about the countries in which Thomson operates. His Chemical Banker, David Moring, must have the same. "David's understanding of our business is important," says Brown. "But so are the flexibility and fast response he and his Chemical Bankers come up with Working closely with Michael Brown, David Moring and his team have provided TTO's publishing interests with multi-purpose, multi-duration credit facilities in six local currencies exactly when required. In a half-hour meeting, they thrashed out an agreement in principle on a medium-term loan for North Sea oil development.

Through Chemco International they helped Thomson's Britannia

But David Moring's personal understand-ing of The Thomson Organisation and the bank's flexibility are two important reasons their relationship continues to grow. That's what usually happens when financial executives get together with Chemical Bankers.

PARIS, Oct. 22 (IHT) — Turkey, which has been on the edge of insolvency after having run up external debts estimated at $12 billion, is about to announce a global plan to restructure its domestic economy as well as

The first elements of this global plan to emerge are a new syndicated loan oo behalf of the central bank and guaranteed by the government and a rescheduling of $2 billion worth of convertible Turkish lire deposits

(CTLDs) held by foreign commercial banks.

The seven-year syndicated loan will be for "up to" $500 million and will pay 14 points over the London interbank offered rate (Libor). There reportedly will be oo fees or commissions of any kind as "the syndicate will be made up of banks who want to belp Turkey," a participant reports.

Created to Woo Turks

The CTLDs were originally created to entice Turks working abroad, particularly in West Germany, to deposit their foreign savings at home. The system, which guaranteed the exchange rate of deposits and paid high interest, was subsequently extended to allow foreign banks to make such deposits with Turkish commercial banks. These now total $2 billion, excluding the remittances of Turkish workers (which will be treated separately) and are being converted into a seven-year loan paying 14 percent over Libor. This facility has a three-year grace period, which means that principal will begin to be repaid only starting in the fourth year.

The other elements of the rescheduling are due to be announced short-

The bellwether operation for Electricite de France has run into considerable resistance, as expected, with the indicated spread starting at a low over Libor. At best, the state-owned utility could raise about $300 million for 10 years with the spread rising to a half-point over Libor in the final seven years. Starting this week, however, lead manager Credit Lyonnais will begin oew "soundings" to see whether $600 million can be raised

if the spread is set at half a point over Libor for the entire 10 years. The Italian railway, meanwhile, is reportedly meeting resistance to its $200 million offering, which pays % over Libor for the first two years and % over for the final five years. Gold Climbs to New High; Silver Retreats

By Sue Shellenbarger

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (AP-DJ) -The precious metals, traditionally artners in fortune in times of inflation and monetary uncertainty, parted company last week in fu-tures trading. Platinum led gold prices to new highs while silver fell behind.

The cootinuing weakness of the dollar oo wildly fluctuating currency markets and a report of a smaller than expected 3.4-percent increase in the U.S. gross national appropriate last quarter continued to product last quarter continued to brighten the appeal of precious metals futures.

But futures prices for silver, the traditional inflation hedge of U.S. traders until gold ownership was le-galized in 1974, moved for the first time in weeks in o direction opposite to gold. The latter gained about $3.50 an ounce for ocarby deliveries and plarinum posted a $22.40 increase for January contracts.

Silver showed slight gains on New York's Commodities Exchange (Comex) early in the week but dropped at midweek to post a net loss, down 5.8 cents an ounce to a still-attractive $5.887 for December delivery.

Falls From $6 Level

Analysts said silver was unable to sustain the $6 level reached earlier this month. "Speculative partici-pation in silver trading is ool as great as it was several years ago," said one analyst. "The market seems to be stuck in a rut."

Gold and platinum, meanwhile, rose to record high cash prices in Loodon and life-of-cootract highs on Comex and the New York Mercantile Exchange. Analysts said skepticism about President Carter's inflatioo-control plan, to be announced Tuesday, combined with

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (NYT) - The stock market's most popular barometer, the Dow Jooes industrial average, plummeted last week in its largest point decline ever. Under pressure from rising interest rates, inflatioo fears and a weakening dollar in currency markets, the blue-chip Dow tumbled 59.08 points to land finally at 838.01.

Gone was the talk of "a oew bull market" that reverberated io Wall Street during the spring and summer when stock prices - and investor optimism - rose so sharply. Only a week earlier, the Dow was heading for 900. The change to sentiment occurred with shattering speed.

"A lot of the selling," a broker commended, "came to margin accounts where traders earlier had bought stock on credit."

Although the industrial average absorbed its worst weekly point-battering on record, this band of 30 promineot issues actually performed better than the rest of the market. The real shellacking came in secondary, or more speculative, issues that within the last two years had chalked up astonishing gains. Profits Despite Carnage

That meant that some people were able to salvage profits despite the market carnage. However, for those who came late to the party, as in the case of gambling-stock buyers, brokers said that some losses — on paper or actually - were substantial.

Caesars World, for example, was a big casualty in the gambling sector. plunged 10% points to 32%. Within the last year, fanned by speculative fever, this stock ran from a low of 61 to as high as 68.

As the price onslaught got under way early in the week, some analysts said the Dow could find buying support in the mid-800 range. When that level was pierced, the guesses for support then switched to the low 800s.

On a percentage basis, the Dow transportation average suffered an lysts said the mark was increasingly attractive as a hedge against the dollar, and a statement by the West German central bank that it would increase its reserve requirements for banks' foreign and domestic lia-bilities sent the mark still higher on

The yen and the Swiss franc also showed slight gains against the dollar, despite statements by the Swiss central bank that it would continue to intervene to money markets to prevent its currency from rising too high against the mark.

A large, $3.8-billion increase in last week's basic money supply, reported Thursday, also was viewed by some traders as portending fur-ther credit-tightening by the Fed.

The earliest method of international trade was by barter. The introduction of money and the eventual acceptance of foreign currencies accelerated the flow of goods and services. Here the skills and flexibility of merchant bankers played an invaluable role.

BHF-BANK traces its heritage to the mid-nineteenth century when merchant bankers were the recognized force in foreign trade financing and new market development, from mining on the African Continent to importing exotic goods from Asia and the New World.

Weakness in DM Sector

The fear of rising interest rates was also at the root of the weakness in the DM sector following the Bundesbank's decision to increase the minimum reserve requirements of the nation's banks. Prices were off by as much as a point but the recent issues for Third World bor-nowers fared much worse.

Argentina's 150 million DM of 10-year bonds, priced at 99 with a coupon of 6½ percent, ended at 97. Venezuela's 150 millinn DM nf 61/2 percent, 12-year bonds, priced at par, were quoted at 97.

However, the disruption in the secondary market is expected to be short-lived. With the Swiss Nationinon-rived with the swiss Nation-ial Bank promising to maintain a parity of at least 80 francs to 100 DM, Swiss investors can comforta-bly buy higher-yielding DM securiies without fear of exchange-rate aposine. Rising interest rates in Japan, where coupons on long-term bonds s now more than 7 percent, is causing potential borrowers to withdraw from the market. Market Hits Steepest One-Week Slide even greater decline. It sank by 25.96 points to close at 223.85, registering a loss of more than 10 percent. Airline stocks, which make up part of the transportation average, lost a great deal of glitter. Furthermore, this underscored the market's basic action whereby the biggest declines generally appeared in stocks that had enjoy-ed the heftiest price runups earlier

For the American Stock Exchange, it ranked by far as the worst week since that exchange instituted a market-value index in September 1973. The index plummeted 18.40 points to 152.39. Comparable losses showed in over-thecounter stocks that also had displayed large gains in the last several years.

Bad news appeared in various guises, from signs that the Federal Reserve was tightening credit conditions again - typically a prelude to even higher interest rates - to annther weekly bulge in money-supply growth and the attendant inflation jitters this sets into motion.

The Fed on Friday appeared to have raised its target for federal funds, the money-market rate that is the cutting edge for all interest charges, to 9 percent. This represents the highest level since late 1974, the year of an awesome "credit crumch."

Gold Climbs To Record

hile-of-contract highs.

Analysts said the demand for lumber continues strong, demonstrating that homeowners apparent ly are willing to cope with the pos-sibility of double-digit interest rates because the resale value of bomes is rising at an even faster rate.

Also on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, livestock futures tumbled across the board this week after a government survey showed a 16-percent increase over last year in the number of cattle on feedlots in 23 states. Traders said the report indicated larger short-term supplies of cattle for prime cuts such as steaks and roasts.

On the Chicago Board of Trade, soybeans led grains on a downturn. Analysis said good harvesting weather created expectations among traders and speculators that heavy harvest-time selling would materialize soon, although farmers so far this autumn have shown more inclination to store their corn and soybeans, apparently awaiting higher prices, than to sell it.

But the worst news of all consisted of a legacy from the previous week. After the close of trading last Friday. Oct. 13, the Fed raised its discount rate, or the rate at which it lends money to member banks, to a record 8½ percent.

One key reason for that move was to bolster the dollar in foreign-currency trading. But it simply did not work out that way. The dollar was weak on Monday, and by Fri-day it had fallen to record lows against the West German mark, the Belgian franc and the Dutch guilder. This response by the dollar ushered in repeated waves of selling in the stock market.

Another depressant was a second look at the implications of the taxcut bill approved by Congress. At first, this had been hailed as a long-term boon to the securities market, thanks to lower capital-gains rates However, the prospect of investors holding back their realizing of profits until the new regulations shortly could take effect, further weakened the underpinnings of the market.

Even in 1929, the year of the biggest market crash ever, the Dow showed a smaller decline for the full trading week than last week. The Dow industrials peaked that year at around 380. Furthermore, in 1929 the buge losses occurred in mid-week, followed by a partial recovery in the Saturday trading ses-

On a percentage basis, the Dow showed a larger loss in the week ended Sept. 13, 1974, when it plummeted more than 50 points at a time when the average hovered in the mid-600's.

Pessimism over the success of President Carter's anti-inflation program, expected to be unveiled Tuesday evening, cootributed to the woes of the stock market.

Schlesinger Discounts U.S. Winter Fuel Crisis

By Robert A. Rosenblatt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 - The United States has plenty of fuel for the winter, according to the secre-tary of energy, James Schlesinger. There is a "substantial" supply of natural gas available, Mr. Schlesinger said Friday at a news conference. Coal production, crippled by a strike last winter, should be uninterrupted, he said. And companies are building their stockpiles of oil in anticipation of a price increase Jan. 1 by foreign producers, he noted.

The National Energy Act recent-ly passed by Congress marks "a great historical watershed" in the U.S. effort to reduce dependence on foreign energy sources, he said. The legislation, which President Carter is expected to sign oext month, should save 2.5 million to 3 million barrels of imported oil daily by 1985, according to Department of Energy estimates.

Days Gone By

The bill demonstrates the "recognition that the nld days of cheap and abundant energy have come to a close," Mr. Schlesinger said.

"I would not expect, at any point, we would achieve energy independence," be said, but added that that the legislation should trim oil imports considerably.

In a further effort to reduce U.S.

consumption of oil, the administra-con will attempt to raise the price of domestic oil next year, Mr. Schlesinger said. A proposal to levy a high tax on domestic production, increasing prices to world levels, was killed in Congress this year.

A tax program will be revived next year, in conjunction with the president's power to lift controls from domestic oil prices, Mr. Schlesinger said. Mr. Carter could remove price controls, then ask Congress for an excess-profits tax to capture the additional carnings of the oil companies.

"We have oot yet decided oo pricing one way or another," Mr. Schlesinger said. But he said that the administration believes "there should be some taxation of profits related to oil production. Tactics may vary, but the admin-istration's goal is to raise domestic oil prices to world levels to inhibit consumption in this country. Domestie oil under price controls sells for approximately $5.50 a barrel, compared with $13.50 for imported © Las Angeles Times

NAPPY EDGES

By Ntozake Shange. St. Martin's. 148 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Harriett Gilbert.

ON AN afternoon in September, 1976, being on holiday in New York City and momentarily tired of sightseeing, I strolled into the Booth Theater to watch a maninee production of which I knew nothing but that its author was a young, black woman and that its title was vaguely pretentious and far too long to far too long to remember. An hour or so later I emerged stunned, awestruck and exhilarated by the power and beauty of Ntozake Shaoge's "For Colored Girls Who Have Coos i d e r e d Suicide/When the Rainbow is Enuf." Immediately, as must have done thousands of others who saw the show, I sought out and bought a book of the poems from which it had been created. BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 24 (UPI) — Seafaring oo the Mediterranean began about 11,000 years ago, in the late Paleolithic era two millenia earlier than previous estimates — archeologists working in a Greek cave have decided. The discovery substantially alters the traditional image of early man as a primitive hunter and gatherer.

Franchthi Cave on the Argolid peninsula has been the site of more than a decade of intensive research hy the Argolid Exploration Project, a joint venture of Indiana and Pennsylvania universities and researchers from around the world.

The researchers say the recent discovery about seafaring is signifi-cant oot only because it helps reconstruct prehistoric lifestyles, but also because it will alert other ar-cheologists to the importance of studying the marine components of civilizations similar to those in the

It even con-tains three or four of the earlier tains three or four of the earlier poems, in slightly altered form. It is, however, a beavier, denser book not only literally — being approximately five times as long as its predecessor — but, also — owing to a new weight, a new seriousness and, unfortunately, at times a new porposity — figuratively as usell pomposity — figuratively, as well. The three introductory pieces and several of the poems themselves are several of the poems the hloated almost beyond readability by Shange's current self-consciousness of herself as a celebrity and as an ambassador of black, feminist

I do say "almost," however, because nothing that she writes is ever entirely unreadable, springing, as it does, from such an intense honesty. from so fresh an awareness of the from so fresh an awareness of the beauty of sound and of vision, from such mastery of words, from such compassion, humor and intelli-gence. From this soil, no matter how entangled and confused they might grow, or how much pruning they might oeed, the plants must always be healthy.

Self-Conscious

And those many poems in "Nap-py Edges" whose power has oot be-come enmeshed in self-consciousness (the rhapsodic songs of love; the living portraits; the lethal and witty attacks, the observations of male society, white society, hypocrisy and mediocrity) are at least as potent, impressive and astonishing as any in "For Colored Girls."

Shange's oew book is crowded with such joys. That the reader must occasionally push through overgrowth in order to find them is due to no lack on Shange's part but rather to an over-abundance — of talent, energy, cultural resources, ambitioo and daring. All of these are qualities which, in a world too full of either careful, or careless. facile writers, should be gratefully, thankfully welcomed.

The hotel management, sounding mortally wounded, denied the charges. Indeed, it seemed as if it had innocently wandered into the crossfire between Israel's constantly warring chief rabbis.

The problem goes back to early this year, when the city rabbinate wrested control of supervision of the dietary laws from Israel's Ashkenazi chief rahhi. Shlomo Goren, renewing an old battle over responsibility for restaurant monitoring. To assert his authority, Jerusalem Chief Rabbi Bezalal Zolti cracked down on the Hilton, charging that unhled meat was found in the

Making a Commercial Is Becoming As Natural as Signing an Autograph

JERUSALEM (WP) — At last. Israel. But here, remember, it's every mother of "my son, the McDavid's, not McDonald's. McDavid's recently opened its doors on one of Tel Aviv's busiest corners and is an undisguised copy of the U.S. fast-food chain. It is the brainchild of David Magen, who was so impressed with McDonald's on a U.S. visit that he "just decided to use my own name and copy their Eddie's, a favorite of Jerusalemites. serves bacon-and-cheese hurgers, so everyone knows how kosher that one is. Uncle Sam's, an aggressive nearby competitor, is ko-sber and makes much of its soft, U.S. style rolls and french fries. The Tavern, an old establishment with a new hamburger recipe, is cornering a share of the growing fad, and a new deli downtown with hot dogs and hamburgers is coming on strong.

Outside of hamburger joints, Chinese restaurants are now the hottest things in town. In the past two months, half a dozen have sprung up, along with a small hut growing Chinese community.

Mandy's, an enterprise of Mandy Rice-Davies of Britain's mid-1960s Profumo-scandal fame, had cornered the market for years with Chinese restaurants bere and in Tel Aviv. Now others are competing.

The Sinbad, once an Arab restaurant opposite Herod's Gate to the Old City, is now, incongruous-ly, Sinbad Chinese Restaurant. Chung Ching, located on the edge of a gasoline station in the Yefe Nof quarter, seems assured of success — for religious if not culinary reasons: Its most prominent decoration is its kosher certificate, proudly displayed near the entrance. Now and then, disbelieving customers squint at the fine print, and even trek upstairs to the WASHINGTON (WP) — That sincere glance, that wobbly voice which rings with righteousness and soothes with compassion - these are the trademarks of actor Jimmy Stewart. He won hearts with them in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." He triumphed with them in "The Spirit of St. Louis." And now he's using them to sell Firestone products on coast-to-coast U.S.

U.S. television.

Between innings of a World Series telecast, people in the United States noticed another familiar face in an unfamiliar context. Danny Kaye was struting his naturally sparkling stuff into a commercial for Polaroid's new instant movie camera.

Then there is the meanest of the mean guys, the rawest of the raw, the most brutish of the brutes — longstanding bully Richard Widmark, whose tough-guy image is currently on sale by a battery company.

They used to be the holdouts, the ones who'd never do a commercial - ever, period. There was something cheap, almost pro-miscuous about hawking one's carefully-nurtured image to peddle a product, they used to say. It was barely regarded as act-ing; it certainly wasn't considered artistic; and it definitely wasn't acceptable in the circles one aspired to.

Changing Standards

But standards of art and acceptability have a way of changing with the times. And lately stars of stage, screen, stadium and po-lucal soap box bave been singing a slightly different tune.

Sammy Davis Jr., for instance, has been burhling the Alka Seltzer jingle; Ella Fitzgerald's voice has shattered glass for Memorex; and Smokin' Joe Frazier bas been knocking 'em out (sort of) for Miller Lite. Making a commercial has become as mucb a commonplace of stardom as signing autographs. It has also become fashionable, or nearly so — and for less than you'd think.

"It would be good press to put in that everybody is making a million hucks, but that's just not true," says Marty Ingels, a Hollywood celebrity broker wbo specializes in reaching unreachable people, "We do a lot of deals for less than $100,000 with wellknown names,

Citrus, which pays Bryant to push fresh orange juice, commissioned a spate of sur-veys which determined, albeit inconclusive-ly, that the campaign seemed to be having only a minimal impact on juice sales.

Once in a while, a featured celebrity does something naughty. For instance, Jane Russell, the well-endowed film actress who promotes bras for International Playtex Inc., raised more than eyebrows among her sponsors when she recently pleadedd guilty to a drunk-driving charge.

There's no sure way to avoid such embarrassments. But sponsors can minimize them by relying on more than a single star to carry their messages. American Express, for nstance, constantly changes the mix of celebrities who promote the company's credit

One other worry that commercials-conscious celebriues now have to fret about: the Federal Trade Commission. The agency re-cently adopted a tough endorsement policy that requires anyone who endorses a product to make a "reasonable inquiry" into the product's proported claims.

The first victim of the policy was singer Pat Boone, whom the FTC staff accused of falsely stating that a product called Acne-Statin could cure acne and was better than other remedies. Boone settled out of court several months ago, agreeing to contribute to any restitution the manufacturer of Acne-Statin might be ordered to make.

The case sent scared the daylights out of the ad industry and threatened to scare the stars out of commercials altogether. But much of the initial nervousness over the FTC's action bas subsided, though some celehrities are taking special care to check out the products they speak up for.

Said Hollywood's Ingels, "I know of one case involving Hope Lange, the actress, who was negotiating to do a spot for a meat product. She asked to taste all the company's products, Eighty-five pounds came in a giant refrigerated crate. For three days, she ate everything in it. She finally did the ad, hut I was convinced when she left to do the commercial sbe was too fat for it."

'Stone's' Sentence: PEOPLE: Concert for the Blind

In Toronto, Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richard, convicted of possessing heroin, was given a one-year suspended sentence and ordered to give a benefit performance for the blind. County Court Judge Lloyd Graburn also ordered the millionaire rock star to continue treatment for heroin addiction at a private psychiatric clinic in New York, and placed Richard on a year's probation. He ruled that he must report twice a year to a probation officer and submit medical retion officer and submit medical reports on his drug treatment. Gra-hurn told Richard to arrange within six months of the begin-ning of his probation" a benefit performance — either solo or with a band of his choice — at the Cana-dian National Institute of the Blind in Toronto. Richard had pleaded guilty to simple possession of heroin. The crown prosecutor then withdrew charges of possession of heroin for the purpose of traffick-ing — which could have sent him to prison for life — and a charge of possession of cocaine.

Maya Plisetskaya, the 52-year-old prima ballerina of the Bolshoi theater who bas thrilled audiences for over a decade, is suffering from arthritis so acute it could end her career, the theater's director said in Moscow. "Whether she will retire is a question only she can answer," Georgy Ivanov said; she is under treatment in a sanatorium and won't return to Moscow until November at the earliest. There are no plans now for ber to appear in any of this season's ballets. The public acknowledgement that Mrs. Plisetskaya is seriously ill follows a disastrous August tour by the Bol-shoi Theater Ballet in Argentina. where she canceled her appearance at the last minute.

A U.S. women's team has conquered Annapurna I, but a U.S. male team has abandoned its attempt to climb the 24,787-foot mountain Annapurna III. Expedition leader Steve Van Meter, 23, of Santa Barbara, Calif., told Nepal's ministry of tourism that after reaching 21,600 feet, his fellowclimbers "chose not to go on the last section" of the mountain's west ridge. He identified the other members of the group as Greg Sapp, 22, of New York City and Ed Comnor, 36, and Werner Landry, 32, both of San Diego, Calif. "The summit was a long distance from there. They were extremely exhausted," Van

It takes more than a beart flutter to make Bob Hope break a goll date. The 75-year-old comedian was felled briefly Monday in Cin-cinnati by what the doctors call "cardiac rhythm disturbance." It occurred while be was appearing on the Bob Braun Show, where he had gone to discuss Hope House — a home he's founded for juvenile delinquents. Hope shrugs off the attack, calling it fatigue, and says he still intends to play today in a Florida golf tournament.

The 25-year-old Miss Commissiong has higher aspirations — says she wants to become a fashion buyer — but the position back home may be tempting.
